Railway Wheels.

you ever notice that the wheels locomotive engine are beveled?

reason for this is that in rounding the outer rail is, of course, a longer than the inner one. The ence is very little, but it would ough to make an engine "skid" it were reckoned for. In the ed wheel the higher part, with its circumference, is forced against outer rail by the very tendency engine to drive straight ahead, with the other wheel the smaller ference rests on the rail, thus minimizing the difference in the lengths lines.

Alcohol as Medicine.

Alcohol has a certain position as a years the use by the medical profession has steadily diminished. It is now said that alcohol is an excellent fever, but the appetite does not normal circulation. If the body feels it demands food."

A FAMOUS PROBLEM.

It Did Not Take Newton Long to Find the Correct Solution.

In Newton's time it was often the custom for illustrious mathematicians, when they had discovered a solution for some new and striking problem, to publish that problem as a challenge to the world while withholding their own solution. A famous instance of this is found in what is known as the Brachistochrone problem, which was solved by John Bernoulli. The nature of this problem may be mentioned. It was to find the shape of the curve along which a body would slide down from one point (A) to another (B) in the shortest time. It might at first be thought that the straight line from A to B, as it is undoubtedly the shortest distance between the points, would also be the path of quickest descent, but this is not so.

There is a curved line down which a bead, let us say, would run on a smooth wire from A to B in a shorter time than the same bead would require to run down the straight wire.

Bernoulli's problem was to find out what that curve must be.

Newton solved it correctly. He showed that the curve was a part of what is termed a cycloid—that is to say, a curve like that which is described by a nail on the rim of a carriage wheel as the wheel runs along the ground. Such was Newton's geometrical insight that he was able to transmit a solution of the problem on the day after he had received it to the president of the Royal society.

Bench, Bar and Board.

The regulations for shaving observed in the bench and bar probably come down from Roman times, and the history of the custom among that people is a curious one. Pliny says that beards were universally cultivated as a matter of course till about 300 B. C., when Sicilian barbers, who probably acquired their art from Greece, first came to Rome and Scipio Africanus set the fashion of shaving every day.

Thenceforward it became so much the vogue in good society that the term parbus, outlandish, was long supposed to mean bearded, in allusion to the unkempt hair of uncivilized nations. Increased accuracy in etymology has shown the real meaning to be akin to balbus, stammering, in allusion to their uncouth speech. For three centuries barbers had it all their own way in Roman circles. Then came the Emperor Hadrian, who, as Plutarch affirms, grew his beard to hide some ugly scars, and forthwith it became the mode. Lawyers and priests, even more conservative in their observances than other folks, continued to shave; hence, it is supposed, came the traditional practice of the English bar, through the law courts of Italy and France.—

THE PEOPLE ALL

In Chronic Cries, Give Us Newher's

Herpicide.

This word of late has been in everyone's mouth, and many are wondering what the word signifies, though no one has yet been found, who will deny that NEWHER'S HERPICIDE does the work.

Well, for the information of thousands of people who like to know all about a good thing, we would say that HERPICIDE means a destroyer or killer of "Herpes."

Now "Herpes" is the family name of a disease caused by various vegetable parasites. A similar microscopic causing, itching-skin, and falling hair; this is the disease that NEWHER'S HERP-ICIDE promptly destroys; after which the hair grows, bold by leading druggists.

Kicked the King's Horse.

On the battlefield, as every one else,

Bismarck looked after the interests of his imperial master. During the battle of Koenigsgratz the old emperor, then king of Prussia, had exposed himself and his staff to the enemy's fire and would not hear of retreating to a safe distance. At last Bismarck rode up to him, saying: "As responsible minister of the crown I must insist upon your majesty's retreat to a safe distance. If your majesty were to be killed the victory would be of no use to us." The king saw the force of this and slowly retreated, but in his real
